Capital enigma: The President's Committee on International Information Activities is about to complete a study of the nation's propaganda program in the cold war, with special attention paid to the Voice of America.

But the information the committee's dug up on American information activities will be shrouded in a secret report. Pressure is already being brought to bear from Capitol Hill for publications of at least a summary.

With good reasons the President's special study group has been called "the Jackson committee." It's headed by W. H. Jackson, former deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency. C. D. Jackson, ~~ex-publisher of~~ Fortune, is a member. Its chief-of-staff until illness forced him to retire was Wayne Jackson, CIA attorney, and its offices were originally scheduled to be on Jackson Pl.
